May 28th – May 29th 2010

After the fall of Topolánek II cabinet in March 2009, a new nonpartisan government was established on the basis of agreement of parties, that early election is going to be held in autumn 2009 as a way out of political crisis. President then called the election date on October 9th – October 10th 2009. However, in the end of August, a deputy elected for Czech Social Democratic Party Miroslav Melcák (who later became independent and voted regularly with Topolánek's government) put a complaint to the Constitutional Court against the decision of President of Republic as well as against the bill on shortening the current legislative term and dissolving the House of Deputies. Surprisingly, the Constitutional court decided in favour of Mr. Melcák's complaint, which provoked an extensive debate among politicians, constitutional lawyers etc. The thing was that this kind of procedure to get to early elections was already once used, without being criticized. Nevertheless, the decision meant that the early election can not be held, because the bill about dissolving the lower house was found to be unconstitutional. Intensive negotiations among parties immediately started, but finally CSSD blocked any other legislative options, which meant that the elections were to be held in its regular term – spring 2010.

Data on Electoral Institutions

If possible, please supplement this section with copies of the electoral law, voters' handbooks, electoral commission reports, and/or any other relevant materials.

Questions 15a through 21d must be repeated for each electoral tier (segment) of each directly elected house of the legislature.

Questions about Voting

Party Bloc Voting

16c. How many rounds of voting are there?

16d. If there are lists, are they closed, open, flexible, or is there party bloc voting?

Open (voters can indicate their preferred party and their favored candidate within that party)

Flexible (voters can allocate votes to candidates either within a single party list or across different party lists as they see fit) – voters are allowed to mark 4 candidates within a party list

17. Are the votes transferable?

(Definition: In systems with preferential voting, a voter can express a list of preferences. E.g., votes can be cast by putting a '1' in the column next to the voter's preferred candidate, a '2' beside their second favorite candidate and so on. Votes are counted according to the first preferences and any candidates who have achieved the predetermined quota are elected. To decide which of the remaining candidates are elected the votes are transferred from candidates who have more than the necessary number to achieve the quota and from the candidate with the least number of votes. An example of this is the election in Ireland in 2002.)
