Description of Study:

JEDS96 (the 1996 Japan Election and Democracy Study) was conducted by the joint-research team between the United States and Japan. Bradley M. Richardson of the Ohio State University and Mitsuru Uchida of Waseda University are the leading principle investigators of this study. The study was mainly funded by National Science Foundation (NSF Grant No. SBR-9632113).

The nation-wide panel surveys were conducted before and after the General Election for the House of Representatives of Japan dated October 20, 1996. This election was the first election under the new electoral system, "single-member district system combined with proportional representation system" in Japan.

The pre-election interviews of JEDS96 were conducted approximately between October 9 and 19, 1996 and the post-election interviews were conducted approximately between October 22 and November 3, 1996. The mail-out survey to follow up was conducted approximately during the following two weeks. The study has the sample size of 1,535 as valid sample for the pre-election wave, and 1,327 for the post-election, and the 1,244 as valid sample for both waves. The total number of questions asked was about 170 questions, the number of variables are over 1,500.

Citation: Any writings or oral presentations based on JEDS96 data should acknowledge the data source, the 1996 Japan Election and Democracy Study (JEDS96), conducted by Bradley M. Richardson, Mitsuru Uchida and associates.

Preparation: The data of JEDS96 (JEDS96el.por; SPSS portable file) and this codebook are exclusively prepared by Kenichi Ikeda, Yoshitaka Nishizawa, and Aiji Tanaka.
