Introduction for interviewers

Good evening/good day!

My name is XXX and I call from Social Science Research Institution. We are doing an electoral study on peoples attitudes and beliefs about various issues in the society. This research is the sixth of its kind in a row of electoral studies but the first one was conducted after the elections to Althingi the legislative of Iceland in 1983. Since 1999 this electoral study has been a part of international cooperation of electoral studies. Your name came up in a sample of 2300 persons from all over the country and because it is important for the study to get the most amount of answers and therefore I ask you for permission to ask you a few questions?

I am obliged to tell you that you have the right to refuse to answer any single questions and you do not have to answer the whole questionnaire. All answers are treated highly confidential and your name does not appear in anyplace in the data, neither on the questionnaire nor in the working process of the data.
